Past.

In 1791, Pierre L'Enfant described his vision for the layout of Washington, DC. At its center, his dreamscape included an open public space where ordinary citizens and dignitaries alike could come to celebrate some of America's most important heroes. Today, the National Mall serves as our country's richest reminder of our collective past.

Present.

Unfortunately, the National Mall is currently in a state of disrepair. The park's last renovation was 30 years ago, after the country's bicentennial in 1976. Since then, the Mall's 25 million plus annual visitors – more than Yosemite, Yellowstone and the Grand Canyon combined – and reduced Park Service budgets have taken a toll, leaving the parkland worn down and threadbare.

Future.

The Trust for the National Mall is the official non-profit partner of the National Park Service dedicated to restoring and improving the National Mall while providing new educational and volunteer activities to connect visitors to the Mall's rich history.

We believe the National Mall – America's Front Yard – should reflect our country's values and be maintained to the highest standards.

With the help of the L'Enfant Society, the Trust aims to make the National Mall the best park in the world.
